

COVER STORY

Prescriptions for a Warming Globe

A field that Kirin's Fukuoka Plant had used to grow barley has been turned into a garden that local people can visit when flowers are in bloom. © Kirin Brewery Co.

Japan can help the world stave off global warming by leading a low-carbon revolution with its “green” technologies and initiatives. This month’s cover story looks at the various ways Japan is contributing to worldwide efforts to fight climate change.